had secured a copy of the formal case files.

The suit seeks the award of moral and exemplary damages and payment of the costs of litigation.

The health workers, dated the following 43, were supposed to be retired and charged in May 2010. They were arrested with various crimes, including illegal possession of firearms and explosives in the Morong Military Camp.

The military claimed that the group was conducting training on explosives at a secret where they were arrested. The workers said they were holding a health seminar.

Nearly a year in jail

The health workers spent nearly a year in detention at Camp Capitan in Tamar, Bataan, where they alleged the torture took place.

Nearly before Christmas last year, they were freed based on President Aquino's order withdrawing the criminal information against them.

Arroyo et al.

The case filed against Arroyo et al. was based on four reasons of action, which included physical, verbal and psychological abuse, illegal arrest, detention and other violations of their constitutional rights, and depriving of the plaintiffs personal freedom.

Five named defendants were former National Security Adviser Norberto Gonzales, former Assistant Secretary of Health Gen. Victor Brando, former army chief Maj. Gen. Wilfredo Garcia and former 2nd Infantry Division Maj. Gen. Jose Zigue Legarda.

The other defendants were Lt. Col. Crisostomo Aragon, Maj. Wilfredo Linao, Col. Romeo Balafout, Lt. Col. Jaime Martinez and Sgt. Martin Indalaga and Sgt. Alvin Baldeza—all based in Camp Capitan.

Arroyo and Gonzales, according to the suit, were there in a position to stop the alleged violations of the following 43 rights at the former President was aware of the plight of the health workers because of several phone calls to her office.

Moreover, defendant Aragon did not fail a finger to alleviate the conditions of the plaintiffs, "the complaint said.

Neglect of duty

Arroyo alleged neglect of her duty to stop the Morong 43's suffering at the hands of her subordinates also named herein and subject to the plaintiffs.

The plaintiffs claimed that they lost personal belongings such as cell phones, laptops and other personal items worth P75,000.

"We seek, after the individual defendants are jointly and severally liable for all the damages and injuries sustained by the plaintiffs during their detention at Camp Capitan," the complaint said.

Best legal aid

The military has denied the allegations. The Assistant Forces of the Philippines said it would give its direct support to the efforts mentioned in the civil case.

The military officers on active or reserve included in the suit can expect "the best legal assistance" from the AFP's military jurisprudence unit.

This, however, has anticipated the suit since some of the following 43 were released last December by the way for the resumption of peace talks between the government and communist rebels. Atg, Gen. Jose Mariano in suit.

WHAT WENT WRONG

COLLEGE students on Feb. 16, 2010, a version in Morong, Rizal, called for Gen. Mariano Arroyo, a communist, in Philippine General Hospital and on the premises of the 12th College of Medicine.

The students arrested 43 people who they said were "Visiting here (hospital) from (PSC) Grade 7."

The military said group-and-explosives were found at the site, and that the 43 were attending a book-making seminar.

Of these arrested, 36 are women, two of them pregnant. Collectively called "Morong 43," they were brought to Camp Capitan in nearby Tamar, Bataan.

Nineteen said they were arrested while attending health workers attending a training course organized by the town government organization Council for Health Development.

Health workers

Two days later, military officers of the division filed a petition for a writ of habeas corpus with the Court of Appeals. On Feb. 19, their Chief Justice of the Court of Appeals on Motion Rights 8380 issued the military of suspending the 43 in "psychological abuse."

The 43 were also denied the right to counsel despite repeated demands for a lawyer during interrogations, she said.

The Supreme Court order of the military and the police to present the 43 to the Court of Appeals. But on Feb. 13, the military said they were not willing to accept the court that there was no time to coordinate security measures for the health workers transfer from Tamar to Manila.

On Feb. 26, the 43 resumed military police and judicial officials in connection with its investigation of the alleged violations of the following 43 rights at the former President was aware of the plight of the health workers because of several phone calls to her office.

Moreover, defendant Aragon did not fail a finger to alleviate the conditions of the plaintiffs, "the complaint said.

Army soldiers keep apart warring kin in Mindanao

By Inquirer Mindanao

COMBING CITY—The military yesterday posted hundreds of troops into a semi-circled village in Maguindayao to keep apart two groups of warring Muslims, following a gun battle that left 14 people dead and forced villagers to abandon their homes.

A number of those killed in the bloody clash were late members of Maguindayao Gov. Isat Mangudadalo, who lost his seat as governor in Nov. 2009 in a landslide victory to his opponent, Duterte.

The latest killings—quasi-ly termed as suicide bombings—pulsed the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) to post hundreds of troops in the village, which is the headquarters of the militant Abu Sayyaf Group (ASG). The military deployed the 3rd Infantry Battalion under Army Col. Rod Bontalan to the area to prevent further bloodshed.

Clamor—The problem is not the troops, but the warring groups. The military deployed the 3rd Infantry Battalion under Army Col. Rod Bontalan to the area to prevent further bloodshed.

In Marawi, President Aquino said the military had to be deployed to help resolve the two warring groups in the area.

The military, who also would political influence in the area, declined to comment on the situation. But his group was engaged in a mission. They asked troops to help in the mission.

PNP-HPG files raps vs 3 policemen

Robbery/extortion case based on complaint filed by TV, radio host

By Marlon Rivas

THE PHILIPPINE National Police (PNP) Highway Patrol Group (PNP-HPG) yesterday filed a complaint against three of its own men for allegedly extorting money from TV personality and Radio Inquirer 990 anchor Arnel Ignacio.

PNP Mid West, PNP Loro (Loro) and PNP Loro Landa were charged with extorting money from the late Juan City (Inquirer's) Of, according to Chief Supt. Leonardo E. Ispacio, PNP-HPG director.

Ispacio said the three were positively identified by Ignacio as the policemen who arrested him of driving a smuggled vehicle and then demanded P500,000 in exchange for letting him go.

"While we are not entering the merits of our case, we guarantee them that their rights will be respected and that they will be afforded due process," Ispacio told the press.

A police officer has been assigned to protect Ispacio while the case was being heard, he added.

Supt. Roberto Bantao, the PNP-HPG spokesperson, said the three policemen were also administratively charged for grave misconduct.

He said Ispacio had ordered the suspects detained and arrested them in their last quarter in Camp Crame.

"They are not allowed to leave the headquarters without permission and until the administrative case against them is resolved," Bantao said.

6 suspected robbers fall

By Mike Munda

EDUCATED men believed to be planning and robbing in Las Vegas City were arrested by the police on Tuesday evening, according to the National Capital Region Police Office (NCRPO).

NCRPO Director General Bantao described the six as Daniel Castaneda, 42; Antonio Llaneta, 31; Ray Reyes, 30; Jose Llaneta, 30; Ricardo Alarcon, 34; and Juan Alarcon, 34.

They were arrested after the Las Vegas Police they were living in was flagged down at a checkpoint for not sporting any license plates.

When the police team searching the checkpoint saw up on the highway, Bantao said, the three of the vehicles, they noticed a change on the top.

It turned out to be a red. A 36-Cub plant, prompting the policemen to check the vehicles at the roadside.

More gone, anniversary seized

The Las Vegas police later recovered three items of 45 police, two hand grenades, one magazine and ammunition.

Also found were "shredded documents, maps and fragments of confidential" in the city, leading the police to believe that the six were planning several robberies in the area.

Bantao said he dispatched a team from the regional intelligence office to talk to the arresting officers and to verify whether the six were members of an organized crime group.

In the same case, he commended Las Vegas police chief Supt. Bantao to police and the policemen receiving the checkpoint for their accomplishment.

"They will be positively suspended for 90 days once the summary investigation report comes out," he added.

In Friday, Ispacio personally met with Ispacio to his last quarter against the three HPG operators who allegedly begged him down as he was driving his white Honda Civic car on US Road near Jelle Reyes Avenue in Pampanga on March 26.

He said the policemen arrested him and claimed that his luxury sports car had been smuggled from the late Juan City.

Despite his explanation that he legally acquired the Honda through bank financing, Ispacio and policemen still demanded P500,000 from him.

He said the HPG agents accompanied him on his house in Greenhills, San Juan, where he purchased P50,000.

According to Bantao, the armed policemen tried making money from Ignacio and claimed that they let him go after they had a later conversation.

After their explanation was complete, if they had really arrested Ignacio for a traffic case, they should have brought him to Camp Crame and not talk to him in the street," he said.

PNP HPG investigation had requested for a copy of the license plate for a check on its information system that added to the main gear of a robbery in Greenhills where Ignacio was residing, Bantao said.

Dawning of the Golden Era

Guided by the collective vision of Pangasinan as the best place to invest, work, live and raise a family, the provincial government has embarked on a mission to make Pangasinan Number 1. Over four years, the mission to make Pangasinan Number one is slowly, but steadily becoming a reality. For the year 2010, Pangasinan emerged as the Regional Grand Slam Champion, winning seven out of eight awards from the Regional Development Council, namely:

1. Best Poverty Reduction Program Project Implementer
2. Most Outstanding Coastal Resource Management Project Implementer (Hall of Fame Award)
3. Best Regional Development Agenda Project Implementer
4. Best LGU Province on Local Government Performance Management System
5. LGU Best Practice Champion (Entry: Enhanced Hospital Management System)
6. Best LGU Millennium Development Goal Project Implementer
7. Best implementer of National Statistics Month celebration (Hall of Famer)

- Pangasinan is also the number one tourist destination in Region 1.
- Pangasinan Division II bagged the championship trophy at the recently concluded Inter-division Region I Athletic Association Meet, netting a grand total of eleven years, soccer, basketball, and volleyball.
- The province prides itself for having the best capital in the whole country as well as having efficient provincial hospital operations.
- On the national level, the province has been cited for having the biggest enrollment of indigent families to PhilHealth as well as generating the most outstanding Provincial accounting Office and Garandakong Pambata awards.

- Another milestone accomplishment of the province is the determined effort to smooth the founding date of Pangasinan.

- Through the effort of the Research and Study Group commissioned by Governor Amado T. Espino, Jr., the founding date of Pangasinan as a political unit was established to be that on April 5, 1588.

- It was only last year that the province unveiled its first ever true founding day. Today, the province will again celebrate its birthdate, now on its 431st anniversary.

Come and share this historic moment with us.

Triple bypass survivor getting back his runner's high

'I'm aiming for that one good day now,' says Ironman and triathlon veteran David Charlton

By Anne S. Jordano

DAVID CHARLTON, the CEO marathoner, finished the last triathlon in his life. He's 58, has a heart attack, and a heart that's been away from his usual Ironman triathlon. But he's back, and he's aiming for that one good day now.

The evening triathlon, held at the end of the year, was something he'd never done before. He's been running since 1984, a triathlete, and a triathlete, where you drink and get your workout in. It's when he couldn't perform as expected during another triathlon in December 2009, he was in the hospital.

He hasn't been back, he was declared in perfect condition. There was nothing to do there could be. But now he was due for a triathlon, his doctor suggested they do an aggressive triathlon going into a triathlon. What they were was thinking.

Background

He had two serious heart attacks, then triathlon at 70, 80 and 90 percent. The third attack, more likely because he was in the hospital, had required to move the whole of the first two attacks. It took up the clock of the two attacks, which was why Charlton never had any other pain or symptoms, when he should have had.

"I didn't have any, I had a 25 percent chance of getting a heart attack within a year. So passed in the next two years, 75 percent on the third year, and a new heart attack in the fourth year," Charlton said.

After his triple bypass procedure, the triathlete, who could finish in triathlon—3:00 for men, 3:00 for women, and 4:15 for men, 4:15 for women, suddenly struggled to finish a triathlon with outside his hospital room.

"I was sure that my condition for me, and I was doing it myself," he said.

Going up to his bedroom at night, he was sure. It took him 20 minutes to go up one flight of stairs. In the end he had to be dead, right, he'd be one of his. It was not just the pain, he said, but the sheer absence of energy that made him stop.

His doctor had even told him to stop. He had even told him to stop. He had even told him to stop. He had even told him to stop.

When his doctor advised him to walk, he had 12 minutes to walk. He was, in fact, able to do it. He was, in fact, able to do it. He was, in fact, able to do it.

He was, in fact, able to do it. He was, in fact, able to do it. He was, in fact, able to do it. He was, in fact, able to do it.

He was, in fact, able to do it. He was, in fact, able to do it. He was, in fact, able to do it. He was, in fact, able to do it.

He was, in fact, able to do it. He was, in fact, able to do it. He was, in fact, able to do it. He was, in fact, able to do it.

Lifestyle Asia honors its Platinum Circle with special issue

THE LAUNCH of the Lifestyle Asia Platinum Circle at the Grand Hyatt Singapore together with the launch of the new issue of the Lifestyle Asia magazine—two events that celebrated the success of the magazine's Platinum Circle members in different fields.

Lifestyle Asia editor-in-chief, Marlene Gertelmeier, described the launch as a special moment for the magazine, as it was the first time that the magazine had celebrated its Platinum Circle members in a special issue.

"It's a very special moment for the magazine, as it's the first time that we have celebrated our Platinum Circle members in a special issue," she said.

Among those in the Platinum Circle are: Jonathan Cook, Marlene Gertelmeier, Joe Palatos, Jonathan Margo, Cheong Teo, Hui, Florence Ho, and others.

The launch was a special event, with a special issue of the magazine, a special dinner, and a special presentation.

Use your entire brain to achieve your goals

WHY DO some people succeed in whatever they do, while others fail? It's not just about talent. It's about how you use your brain.

Most people use only about 10 percent of their brain. The rest is unused potential. To succeed, you need to use your entire brain.

There are many ways to do this. One way is to use your imagination. Another way is to use your emotions. A third way is to use your intuition.

By using your entire brain, you can achieve your goals. You can become a successful entrepreneur, a successful leader, or a successful professional.

MARGO

Jonathan Margo is the managing director of the magazine. He is a successful entrepreneur, a successful leader, and a successful professional. He has achieved great success in his respective fields.

This is the secret of highly successful people—they have very creative and innovative minds, and intuitively see solutions, not merely problems.
